MEET COMMISSIONER TODD STAPLES

Todd Staples is the 11th Texas Commissioner of Agriculture and recently was re-elected to serve a second four-year term in this statewide elected office. Commissioner Staples believes the free enterprise system and individual responsibility are the keys to prosperity for Texas.

From his earliest days of public service as a member of the Palestine city council through his tenures in the Texas House of Representatives and later the Texas Senate, Commissioner Staples has championed such critical issues as protection of private property owners' rights, workers' compensation reform, school finance reform and improving the education of Texas' leaders of tomorrow, just to name a few.

As leader of the Texas Department of Agriculture, Commissioner Staples is diligent in his efforts to support private sector job creation and economic development across the Lone Star State; improve consumer protection from the grocery store to the gas pump; lead true eminent domain reform in Texas; and play an enormous role in continuing to improve the healthy lifestyles of young Texans.

He is also focused on the promotion of agricultural products and businesses using the GO TEXAN marketing program, and has expanded trade opportunities for Texas producers. Commissioner Staples has accomplished these priorities with a philosophy that puts family and taxpayer interests first while also focusing on efficiency.

Commissioner Staples was born in Anderson County where he was active in high school FFA and was elected state FFA vice president. He attended Texas A&M University where he graduated with honors with a degree in agricultural economics.

Commissioner Staples began serving in public office in 1989 when he was elected to the Palestine city council. In 1995 he was elected state representative and served three terms in the Texas House before being elected state senator in 2000 where he served two terms. His public service continues today as Agriculture Commissioner. Following his first election in 2006, he was re-elected to a second term in 2010.

Commissioner Staples and his wife, Janet, have four grown children.

We Welcome

Welcome to the Texas Brangus Breeders "Miss America" Sale. Even though we have been through the worst drought in years, it is raining in several areas of Texas so we should see green grass this spring. We can be optimistic about the future of the cow business. Numbers are down and calf prices are at an all time high. Most of us have had to reduce our female numbers so with green grass coming everyone should have room for a few high quality Brangus.

This sale features three extremely good Herd Sire Prospects, one sired the renowned Rocky Joe 650, one by the popular Presidente bull and the other by the proven Singletary bull. There are open heifers good enough to show and be competitive. The bred and pairs are of the quality that some will be Donor Prospects.

Mark Friday, February 17th on your calendar and get involved with your state association meetings, sale and dinner and dance. Guest speaker, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, Todd Staples, will make your trip worth while.

If I can assist you in any way, please call.

Gary Bruns
Sincerely,

Gary Bruns
